A Finitful Crop of Stamp Companies. To the Editor of The Evening Star:

As a merchant I have followed the Trading Stamp Company fight with considerable interest, and most heartily indorse and commend The Star for the action it has taken in the premises, and beg to say that your paper deserves the earnest co-operation of not only every merchant, business and professional man who pretends to have the commercial interest of the city at heart, but also all good citizens. Agents of the Home Coupen Company of Newark, N. J., are now scouring the city, in op-position to the Premium Stamp Company, the Washington Trading Stamp Company, the Losano Syndicate Co-operative Stamp Company, the National Trading Stamp Company and a few others yet embryo, and it looks as if the city merchants were such a soft mark that some forty or fifty stamp companies would soon be doing a lucrative business at the expense of their extensive (2) profits.

extensive (?) profits. One of these companies admits that less than 20 per cent of the stamps given out are ever redeemed, and that, therefore, over 80 per cent of the stamps paid for by mer-chants are clear profit to the company. The only conclusion to be drawn from this is that there would soon be more stamp companies than stores, and no local es-tablishment would then have any advanttanishment would then have any advantage over another, while the merchants would simply be five per cent worse off than they were before. It seems strange to me that any merchant should be so short-sighted and blind to the business interests of the city as to uphold any of these companies for one moment.

Gen. Miles Addresses Veterans.

Major General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the army, last evening addressed a large gathering of veterans at the Ebbitt House, relating in an interesting manner some of the details of his recent trip abroad. General Miles spoke particularly of the repetition of history marked at the pass of Thermopylae. About 2,000 years ago, he said, Leonidas and the Spartans laid down their arms and indulged in games to induce an attack on the part of the Persians, while similar means were em-ployed in the recent war by the Turks in an attempt to draw the Greeks from their

STREET RAILROADS

Plans of the Managers of the Principal Local Lines.

WHAT THEY WILL ASK FROM CONGRESS

Rival Claims of Corporations to Enter Unoccupied Territory.

AT THE COMING SESSION

The managers of the local street railroads have, as a rule, by this time pretty well mapped out what they propose to ask from Congress during the coming session. As every one knows who is at all familiar with District legislation before the national legislature, an important if not a large proportion relates to the local street railroads. There has been even some complaint that this phase of local legislation has at times so absorbed the time and attention of the District committees of the Serate and House that they have not been able to give proper consideration to other matters relating to the District.

As Congress is the sole and only au thority from which these corporations secure their chartered rights and such modifications and additions as from time to time may seem necessary, the local street railroad managers are of the opinion that they only occupy their proper share of the attention of the national legislature. At the coming session it is likely that the usual number of bills will be introduced relating to street railroads. Exactly what the managers of each line intend to ask Corgress at this coming session in the way of street extension is a subject which they are strongly opposed to discussing, even in the columns of The Evening Star.

What the Railroads Fear.

The reasons are the obvious ones avoiding hostile attention. There are two principal sources of opposition which the promoters of railroad legislation greatly fear. One is from rival corporations and the other from the residents and property owners along the streets which it is propesed to occupy with street car tracks. The first named, it is asserted, is the principal cause of the failure of street legislation in the past, and is likely to continue to be a fruitful source of disappointment in the future. the future.

There is likely to be a very lively con-

There is likely to be a very lively contest before the next session of Congress, growing out of the rivalry between the Capital Traction Company and the Columbia Company to secure the privilege of building a line along G street west from 17th street. This is an old fight, and the probabilities are that it is going to be reprobabilities are that it is going to be re-newed with greater vigor than ever. It newed with greater vigor than ever. It has been supposed by some that owing to the losses which resulted from the destruction by fire of the power house of the Capital Traction Company that corporation would not be in a position to ask for any further extensions of its lines for the present at least.

Traction Company's Prospects.

On the contrary, however, the managers of the company say they were never in a better position than they are at present to extend the lines which they now control. They say that the cable system which was in use on the Pennsylvania avenue and 14th street lines, and which is now being replaced by the underground electric, was one of limited power, and is now being replaced by one of practically limitless power.

It is also claimed that they are now in a better position financially to get money, as the company has as yet issued no bonds, and in the event that the authority is and in the event that the authority is granted the company to build any extensions, bonds can be issued as is proposed to be done in order to raise money to install the present system, and these bonds can simply be deposited as collateral for a loan, to be paid off as soon as the earnings instify ings justify.

ubt that the company in tends to ask for the right to build a line along G street and F street from 17th street west, and it is understood that their plans contemplate the operation of this proposed extension by the underground system, which is now being installed on system, which is now being installed on the Pennsylvania avenue line. If this is done, the 17th street extension will oc-cupy the same relation to the main or Georgetown line which the 14th street line bears to the Georgetown line, and cars can run from the Baltimore and Ohio depot or from the navy yard along the avenue to 17th street, and along G street to the western terminus. What the Columbia Wants.

As is well known, the Columbia company wants to continue its line from its present western terminus at New York avenue and 15th street along the thoroughfare in front of the White House, using the tracks of the Capital Traction road, and thence via 17th street along G street to the river. The Columbia road is now operated by a cable, and, while it is stated the company has no present intention of changing its power, still it is possible, if it should be found necessary in order to operate this extension to install the underground system, that the

A Finitful Crop of Stamp Companies. ital Traction read there was a provision for the continuation of the line northward up 22d street. While it is not known positively what the exact wishes of the company in this respect are, it is believed that at this time the company does not desire the privilege to extend the line any further than along G street west from 17th street.

Another Contested Point.

There is another point where it seems likely that two corporations will fall afoul of each other in their efforts to secure the right to occupy disputed territory. Reference is made to the fact that the Metropolitan road, by its recent extension from the head of Connecticut avenue along Co-lumbia road to 18th street, and the Capital Traction by its line, which extends out 18th street and thence out Connecticut avenue extended to Chevy Chase, stand on the edge of a territory which is yet without a street railroad. have been introduced in Congress at previous sessions to authorize both roads to make extensions out 18th street, and thence through Mt. Pleasant to 14th street. The general impression seems to be that the contest which was begun at a former session of Congress between these two roads will be renewed at the coming session. It, however, can be stated upon good authority that the two corporations will not lock horns over this issue at this session of Congress. At least that is not the present intention. It is stated positively on behalf of the Metropolitan railroad that that corporation wants no more extensions at present, and that it is satisfied to operate the state that a state the state that it is satisfied to operate the satisfied to operate t ate its existing lines. Relief for Mount Pleasant.

While the same statement is not made on behalf of the Capital Traction Company, yet it is said that the managers of that corporation do not want to build an extension at this time along the route as specified in the bills already introduced. If this is the accurate position of the two companies on this subject, Congress will not be asked at this session by either for permission to enter the territory which stretches west from 14th street to Rock

Other people, however, can ask Congress to give the companies the authority, or, rather, require the companies to build lines, and it has been suggested, in behalf of the residents of Mount Pleasant, that Congress be asked to require the Capital Traction Company, while it is putting in the underground system on the 14th street line, to build a loop at the terminus, which could extend westward on one of the streets running through Mount Pleasant, and returning by snother street. By this plan, it is claimed, a car could be run from the heart of the city out 14th street and through Mount Pleasant to its western limited.

The Capitol Hill Grade. There is another matter which it is likely will be brought to the attention of Congress in connection with the installation of the new system on the Capital Traction lines. It is claimed that there are certain mechanical difficulties about ascerding Capitol Hill along B street south, which is the present line of the road, and it is asserted that Congress may be asked to give the company authority to change its present line, so that instead of ascend-ing Capitol Hill to the south of the Capitol, the cars operated by the proposed new system will turn to the north at the Peace monument, as is done with the 14th street line at present, and following that line to the Baltimore and Ohio station, thence by the Mctropolitan tracks around Capitol Park and in front of the new Library building, rejoining at that point its present line, by which the cars will continue east to the

It is, of course, not known positively that it is the intention of the company to ask Congress for permission to make such a change, but it is asserted in well-informed circles that it is likely such a proposition

The Columbia's Trolley Road.

It is probable that the Columbia road, in the heat of the contest to secure authority for the proposed western extension, will overlook what is perhaps regarded as of more value to the company, and that is the right to build an overhead trolley line from the eastern terminus of the road at 15th and H streets northeast along Benning road to the village of Benning.

As has already been stated in The Star active work is in progress by a syndicate composed mainly of western capitalists in constructing a steam road from a point on the Chesapeake bay, about twenty-five miles south of Bay Ridge, to the District line. It is the purpose of this syndicate to ask Congress for the right to continue this road through the District to a point in the vicinity of Benning or Deanewood. If such authority is given, and the Columbia road secures permission to build its extension, then these two roads will be operated in conjunction, so that it is believed by the promoters of this enterprise that passengers can be taken from the heart of the city to the Chesapeake bay in an hour's

In the attempt made above to outline what the street railroads of the city intend to ask from Congress at the coming session in the way of extensions, no reference has een made, for obvious reasons, to either the Belt or Eckington railroad. Neither have the various suburban roads been alluded to, but it is not believed that any the near future by the companies operating hese lines. His subject will be "The Moral Lesson of Macbeth," and from Dr. Stafford's wellknown ability as a lecturer it may be assumed that his treatment will be highly interesting. Dr. Stafford is an exceedingly eloquent pulpit orator and is equally effective on the lecture platform. He has been a deep Shakespearean student and will undoubtedly present original ideas in regard to the great tragedy of which he will speak. Dr. Stafford has great dramatic power, which adds to the interest of his lecture, and this accomplishment will find ample scope in his treatment of "Macheth".

Eight fancy chickens were in the bag, which had been dropped, and this convinced the officers that the prisoners had been guilty of larceny. Later in the day Mr. R. E. L. PRACTICALLY UNDER ROOF

The Georgetown University Hospital is Nearing Completion.

Description of the Structure and of Its Proposed Accommodations-Another Building Contemplated.

The work of constructing the new Georgetown University Hospital, at 35th and N streets, is being rapidly pushed, and the building is now practically under roof.
Only one of the buildings proposed is being built, the funds on hand not being large enough to commence the construction of the other, as at present contemplated. The one now going up is four stories in height, with a basement. The architect is Mr. Keferstein. Mr. J. B. Collins is the builder, while Messrs. Lynch and Columbus are doing the brick work.

The building, which is the main one of the hospital, has a press brick front, which, with the added trimmings, presents a pretty architectural appearance. One thing to which especial attention has been given is the arrangement for light. Windows are placed so as to give plenty of sunlight at all hours of the day, and at the same time afford good ventilation. Above the third floor, carved in the bricks, is the name of the institution, "Georgetown University Hospital." The only front projection is an oriel window from the third floor, while in the rear a circular bay window runs from the ground to the top story. On the west side sufficient space has been allowed to permit an ambulance to drive up to the door for delivery of a sick or injured person to the institution.

Hall in the Center.

There is a large hall in the center of th. building, on every floor, which affords eas, building, while to the east of it the stair are located.

On the first floor the large north mai oom will be used as a lecture room. Ad olning this on the east is the emergenroom. There are several other smaller rooms which will be used by the attendant. of the place. The south central room wil used as a reception room. Floor for Hospital Purposes.

The second floor will be used entirely for hospital purposes. The main north room will be divided by partitions and contain three private wards. On either side are small rooms, well lighted, which will also be used as wards, as will also the south central room, making in all five wards on this floor. A pantry will also be located in the hallway.

The main room on the third floor will be used as an operating room. To the east the small room will be used by the physi-cians, while on the west is what is termed the recovery room. One ward will be located in the large hallway, and the south central room, with the circular bay window, will be used as a chapel.

The fourth floor contains four rooms, which will be used by the attendants of the hospital. Every floor is well supplied with closets and baths. Work on the interior of the building will be commenced at an early day and pushed forward as rapidly as the funds on hand will permit. BALLOTSI STOLEN.

pecial Correspondence of The Evening Star. ROCKVILLE, Md. November 11, 1897. Saturday night last some one entered the oom of the supervisors of election at this place, evidently with the intention of tampering with the ballots cast at Tuesday's election. A thorough search had been made of the room, evidently to secure the keys to the ballot boxes, but the clerk to the supervisors had taken the precaution to place them where they would fall into the hands of none but the right parties. The supervisors had met Saturday to ansact some business, which had been carried over since Thursday, and while they were in session some one stole the key to the door, which was not discovered until they had adjourned and the clerk was clos-ing up. Thinking there was something ing up. Thinking there was something crooked, another key was procured and the door locked. The keyhole was sealed and a piece of paper sealed to the door and the amb. It was discovered Monday morning that both seals had been broken and some one had been in the room. The box con-taining the blank ballots of Damascus district and the box containing the ballots of the first precinct of Rockville district were taken, and have not yet been recovered. This occurrence has created considerable excitement in the community, and it is un-derstood a large reward will be offered for the apprehension of the thief. The ballot were in charge of the clerk of the court, having been turned over to that official by the board of supervisors, as the law directs. The theft can have no effect on the election, as the vote had been canvassed and certified to the proper officials.

Roaring, Buzzing, Snapping Like the Report of a Pistol— These Are the Symptoms of Catarrh-How to Cure It.

Catarrh in the head is an exceedingly dis agreeable and very common disease. It is also serious in its effects, as it causes loss of smell and hearing, headaches, loss of ap-petite and often leads to consumption. The victim of catarrh is troubled with a continual dropping in the throat, discharges ting, pain over and between the eyes. The wonderful success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in curing catarrh is due to its power to purify the blood. By eradicating all scrofulcus taints it removes the cause of catarrh and all the disagreeable symptoms of the disease soon disappear. The cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla are prompt, positive and permanent. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures when all other remedies fail.
